

Requirements of carriers transporting live animals

We ask you to ensure the following when transporting live animals:

- The means of transport used for transporting the animals is in good technical condition.
- The vehicle may not show any leakage in the port area or on the car deck of the ferry as a result of the transportation.
- The shutters of vehicles carrying live animals are closed before reaching the port area.
- Vehicles used for transporting animals are clearly and visibly marked with a reference to live animals.

According to the terms and conditions of service, we have the right to refuse to transport vehicles and goods [they are carrying] that could damage or harm the ferry or the other vehicles, goods or passengers being transported.

The captain of the ferry has the right to refuse to load cargo onto the ferry if it could damage the ferry or harm passengers or if this is necessary to guarantee safety and avoid delays.

The general requirements of the vehicle and the transporting of animals are laid down in the Animal Protection Act.
